

IF YOU

Are going out of town for a few weeks there are several things you will probably need—a Blue Serge Coat—they are here at $4, $5, $6, and $7—all sizes in both double and single breasted. Duck Trousers are now only $2 for those which were $4, $3—and $1 for the $2 and $1.50 ones. All Tennis and Outing Coats and Pants are One-third less than usual prices.

By all means take along a Light Overcoat. We'll supply it if you haven't one. A good one, at midsummer prices, too.

SHERIFF'S EYES CLOSED

Palmer Doesn't See Behind Locked Doors and Shutters.

BARS AND GAMES GOING

Yesterday Jackson City Was Quiet, but It Was Due to the Heat—Times Man Gained Access to a Saloon and an ex-Constable Wanted to Lead Him to a Gaming Layout.

Virginia's notorious and crime-filled Monte Carlo, otherwise Jackson City, probably never enjoyed a quieter Sunday than it did yesterday. The conditions were not, however, due to the influence of Sheriff Palmer and his corps of constables, but to the intense heat. Toward night, however, the dens opened and the wild wind of dissipation and drinking broke loose.

Old Sol poured his red hot rays all day on the Long Bridge and unprotected dens lying the single street of Jackson City, and as a consequence very few stragglers passed over the scorched planks to spend their money in barrooms and gambling dens.

Yesterday afternoon every saloon and den was apparently closed, and but for a few tourists and constables, the one thoroughfare was deserted. The "limbs" of the law were lounging about in the shade talking to a few hangers-on, but when the Times' man approached, every brass badge bearer arose and eyed him suspiciously.

HE KNEW THE ROPES.
Further up the avenue of inquiry the reporter met a small-sized colored man. "Hot day, sar," saluted the man, and in the next breath, "beer would go about now."

"Every place closed up, is it?" Inquired the Times.
The negro stepped behind the frame building known as the Long House, and beckoned to the reporter.

"Boss," he whispered, "if you treat me to a beer I'll show you what you kin get sumpin' to drink."
"Will you show me a room where there is gaming, too?" was asked.

"Yes, indeed; I knows all de ropes. All dese places is open, but you can't get in less'n you knows de ropes. Come on over to Harry's place."
On the way across the railroad track the fellow said:
"Now, you makes out I knows you. My name is Cox. I used ter be on de police force here. What's your name, sah? Neber mind; you's Mr. Marshall, dat'll do."

"Harry's place" is the first building on the left side of the railroad. Every door and shutter was sealed, and as the man said, unless a person were "on to the ropes," it was needless to try to get in the dens.

A rap on the side gate by Cox brought two doated-looking individuals to the portal.
"We wants a drink ob pump water, please," said the guide, addressing one of the men.

ADMITTED TO THE BAR.
Without more ado both were admitted, and by passing behind a partition of lattice work the bar was reached.

A stout man wearing a scrubby red mustache was behind the counter. A half-drunk man lay on two chairs to the corner, and two other fellows were doing their best to fill up on beer. The reporter and ex-constable made their exit.

"If you want to get in any game well go up stairs. Did you hear the racket up dare? Everything is going on up dare."

"Deed, sah," he continued, "on Sunday or on Sunday dese places don't close up. 'Dare is Mike Butler. When 'Harry's Place' gets full Mike's takes in all what's left over."

"Sheriff Palmer only comes here one't a week and den on Sunday. He rides in, looks at de outside of de places, tells de policemen to step lively, and goes away. 'Of course, de police don't tell none of de places to close up, 'cause if dey do, dey can't get nothin' to drink."

"At this juncture a carriage containing a very fat man and several thin young women, rolled from the south end of the bridge. As the vehicle whirled around the corner in view of the looting aggregation of tourists, hoboes and policemen, all hands became animated and moved off.

The man in the carriage, Cox said, was the brother of Deputy Sheriff Doolittle, a very strict man.

Toward midnight the Long Bridge was filled with throngs going from Washington to Jackson City to drink, stake on the roulette and chance wheels and amuse their policy rows in the upper rooms of the dens across the river.

DID HE SWEAR FALSELY?

Origin of the Charge of Perjury Against Newman.
A warrant is to be issued to-day charging Myer B. Newman, the Shylock, with perjury. Mr. John B. Miller, who resides at No. 1226 Tenth street southeast, said to The Times last night that he had made an application for a warrant to this effect to Warrant Clerk Washburne, of the police court, and that he would appear this morning at 9 o'clock and sign the necessary papers.

Mr. Miller was a witness in the case against Newman, pending before Judge Scott, in which Newman is on trial for doing a pawnbroker's business without a license.

In his testimony Mr. Miller told Newman point blank that he was a liar as to a certain statement made by him to an auctioneer of Mr. Miller, on the other hand, alleged that the goods were taken elsewhere; and this he is prepared to prove. Mr. Miller said that he did not care about stating other points of his proof.

The case for Mr. Miller is in the hands of Messrs. Kaiton and Shidlow.

When the statement of a warrant was made Mr. Washburne referred Miller to Assistant District Attorney Jefferson, who authorized Mr. Washburne to investigate the matter and if, after an examination of the witnesses, the charge was well founded, to issue the warrant.

The witnesses will be examined by Mr. Washburne to-day, when in all probability the warrant will be issued.

In the notice of this case printed yesterday in The Times the residence of Mr. Miller was inadvertently stated to be No. 1112 L street northwest, which is the residence of Mr. J. Baker Miller, who, of course, is not interested in the proceedings.

The Layers to March in White.

The Mosaic and Eucalyptus The Layers, 1195 K. of L. have decided to wear in the parade on Labor Day, white caps, white sweaters, and white trousers. They will also carry white umbrellas. They will make a good showing, as they are all large, fine looking young fellows and have a strong organization.

Three Men in a Fight.

Backstreet-cliffed Bill Tyndes, a laborer, and Thomas Rismartine, a clerk, were gathered in on a Jackson City street, while they were engaged in a lively fight at the transfer station, Seventh street and Pennsylvania avenue northwest. The men left collateral for their appearance in the police court today.

LOTTERY LAW VIOLATIONS.

Postmaster General to Decide on Bond Investment Concerns.
The question whether or not the business conducted by the bond investment companies throughout the United States is a violation of the anti-lottery law will be decided probably to-day.

Ex-Congressman Benjamin Butterworth last week concluded his argument before Postmaster General Wilson in favor of these companies, and Judge Thomas, Assistant Attorney General for the Post-office Department will present the government's side to-day, upon Mr. Wilson's return from Long Branch. The Postmaster General will then render his decision.

Mr. Butterworth, in his protest against the denial of the privilege of the mails for the communication of these companies, argued against the power of one man to stop the business of many, which, he said, was sufficient to produce a revolution. It is stated authoritatively at the department that the adverse decision of the Assistant Attorney General will be sustained by the Postmaster General.
